

I understand that the Consumer Bankers Association has chosen to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in a proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission. I oppose this challenge and want Indiana's laws to stay as they are.
I don't want the telephone I pay for to be a sales tool for solicitors. I can't tell you how nice it is for our family not to hear the phone ringining in the evening unless it is someone we want or need to talk to.
Modern life has enough unwanted interruptions so please don't allow those sales calls to start back up again.

Andrew Hughes